

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5 A projection display device comprises a screen configured to allow light which is projected from an optical projection device to be imaged and displayed as an image, a detection section configured to detect a breakage of the screen, and a control section configured to suppress the light from being projected from the optical projection device.